From Routledge : Accounting and Business Economics: Insights from National Traditions (Routledge Studies in Accounting) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Accounting and Business Economics: Insights from National Traditions (Routledge Studies in Accounting):

The recent financial crisis has sparked debates surrounding the nature and role of accounting in informing capital markets and regulatory bodies about the financial performance and position of a firm. These debates have drawn attention to the broader implications of accounting for the economy and society. Accounting and Business Economics brings together leading international scholars to examine the current state of accounting theory and its fundamental connection with the economics and finance of firms, viewing the business entity from not only accounting, but also national, economic, social, political, juridical, anthropological, and moral points of view.

"This book is a major contribution to the accounting literature. It will be a useful resource on the bookshelves of all accounting academics, especially those interested in accounting history, accounting theory, and international accounting." -- Asheq Rahman, Massey University, New Zealand, for The International Journal of Accounting

About the Author Yuri Biondi is tenured research fellow at the CNRS, appointed to the ESCP Europe in Paris. His research interests include theory, accounting and financial regulation, as well as the relations between economy, accounting, and finance in business and non-business entities. He is co-editor of The Firm as an Entity: Implications for Economics, Accounting, and Law (Routledge, 2007). Stefano Zambon is chair of accounting and business economics at the University of Ferrara, and a visiting scholar at London Business School; ESCP, HEC, and CNAM in Paris; the Universities of Reading, Melbourne, Boston, Metz, Canterbury (NZ), Waseda (Tokyo), Bolzano/Bozen, and the Stern School of Business (NYU). He is a leading scholar of accounting and business economics in Europe and author of Locating Accounting in its National Context: The Case of Italy (2002).
