From Asian Development Bank : Administration and Governance of Higher Education in Asia: Patterns and Implications (Higher Education In Dynamic Asia: Study Reports) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Administration and Governance of Higher Education in Asia: Patterns and Implications (Higher Education In Dynamic Asia: Study Reports):

Asian countries, despite differences in their higher education (HE) systems and in their political and social structures, increasingly see the HE sector as a strategic lever for long-term sustainable development. Transforming the HE sector will depend very much on the capability of both national agencies and HE institutions to work together in creating more alignment, lessening tension, and achieving a balanced and efficient governance system for HE. This publication provides a timely analysis of administration and governance of HE and presents recommendations to improve this field in Asia.
