4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. How to Help Individual Investors Help Your Venture By Michael Palmer To make a successful pitch to investors, you need to do your homework. And part of that homework includes carefully thinking about the interests of the person whose money you want. Why would they want to invest in our business? What are they looking to accomplish? What traits and characteristics are they looking for in us? What is all of that important to them? In What Every Angel Investor Wants You to Know, Brian Cohen answers these and many more questions. Many might think it's all about the money. Wrong. Angel investors already have a pile of money. They don't want to lose money, to be sure. But angels are looking to accomplish something, to be part of something meaningful. And if you are the right person and have the right business, you can help them succeed. You can help them help you get what you want. The appendixes alone are worth the price of the book.
